The 2ilton-Beecher Triat.

The 1ilton-Beecher Triat.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 20.—The usual crowd of spectators attended the Beecher trial to-day, interspersed with members of Plymouth Church, clergymen, lawyers, a icw ladies, and others, all interested in the progress of the cause. Beecher and Tilton were both present, with a troop of friends. Moulton took the stand. Evarts announced that exJudge Porter, associate counsel, had been taken suddenly ill.

As he has been conducting the cross-examination of Moulton, this would seriously embarrass the defense, who would be compelled to apportion cross-examination among them. The counsel for Tilton strongly objected. Judge Nellson said he had no objection to two counsel conducting the examination.

Nellson said he had no objection to two counsel conducting the examination. Beach delivered a speech protesting against this decision, and said he would seriously object it it were decided between Evarts and Tracey.

Tracy essayed to speak, but the Judge stopped him and quietly said he saw no impropriety in Tracy conducting it. Tracy then sharply denounced Beach's remarks as unwarrantable, and said for the assault upon him Beach was personally responsible to his conscience and his God.

God.

He spoke a few words, declaring his belief in Beecher's innocence, and was faintly cheered when he ended. Tracy then began the cross-examination, confining Moulton chiefly to the interviews between Beecher and himself in December, 1870, and January, 1871.

Tracy continued the cross-examination of Moulton. He questioned him in relation to the pistol scene with Beecher.
Moulton locked the door after Beecher had retired. Only knew in a general way the nature of Bowen's charges against Beecher. He told Beecher he considered Bowen treacherous.

Tracy then endeavored to show by wit-mess that Tilton told him the story about Bowen.

Tilton's counsel sprang to their feet in an instant, and objected to it. After a long wrangle, the question was finally admitted by Judge Neilson.

Moulton denied that Tilton told him

Moulton denied that Tilton told him that Boecher engaged rooms at the notel with a bedroom adjoining, in company with a lady, but admitted that Tilton told him Beecher had acted improperly towards several women. Moulton never explained to Beecher that he believed those stories, but simply said Bowen was treacherous.

erous. Witness was certainly not Beecher's enemy. Another rangle occurred be-tween the counsel over Tracy's dogmat-te style of pushing the witness to tell whether he knew that Mrs. Tilton was sick.

Moulton then recited the famous interview between himself and Beecher, in which he demanded Mrs. Tilton's retraction. Some dispute occurred concerning the terms "sexual intercourse" and "expression," and it was finally decided to leave the question to the stenographer's notes. A recess was then taken.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—In the Senatorial contest in the Minnesota Legislature there seems no probability that the Republican difference can be harmonized on either Ramsey or Davis. Beecher Notes.

The Plymouth pastor preached last Sunday, as usual, just as though nothing was happening. The house was thronged; the police had to keep order and prevent men, women and children from being trampled under foot in the grand rush. If Barnum were to offer the sight of a new bearded woman gratis to all who would call the rush could not be greater or more revolting. Mrs. Beecher remained at home. Pure white flowers, emblems of innocence, adorned the pulpit, Mr. Beecher wore a new suit-of black, and a neavy gold chain. His text black, and a neavy gold chain. His text was—"For He saith unto Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion;" "Therefore, hath He mercy on whom He will have mercy, and whom He will He hardeneth." In and whom He will He hardeneth." In the closing prayer Mr. Beecher said: "O, God, Thou art not the spy of the universe, searching out the transgressions of every man and seiting them down against him."
